

Soft, healthy skin an easy cell

Fraxel Repair Co2 Laser treatments help new skin cells replace older, damaged cells.

WHETHER it's scarring, sun damage, or the ravages of age, there's no need to accept severe skin imperfections, thanks to a new generation of safe, non-surgical treatment options. Dr Buddy Paul Beaini, director of MD Cosmedical Solutions, explains Fraxel Repair Co2 Laser.

WHAT IS FRAXEL REPAIR CO² LASER?

Fraxel treatments use fractional technology to send thousands of microscopic laser columns into the skin. This stimulates the body's natural healing process to replace old cells with fresh, healthy new skin. The Fraxel Repair Co2 laser uses a high-intensity carbon dioxide laser in this procedure to penetrate deep into the skin.

WHO CAN BENEFIT FROM TREATMENT?

People aged anywhere from 25 to 80 choose Fraxel Repair Co2 Laser treatments for a range of skin conditions on the face, neck and décolletage. "It treats most skin conditions, from acne and burn scars, through to sun spots, sun-induced redness, pigmentation and melasma (skin discolouration)," Dr Buddy says. "Older people use it to soften deep frown lines, smokers' lines around the lips, to reduce wrinkles and tighten saggy skin."

WHAT DOES TREATMENT INVOLVE?

A numbing anaesthetic cream and localised injections are applied to the treatment area and the laser procedure itself takes about 30 minutes. "Your skin is quite red for the first three-to-four days with some micro bleeding spots and is mostly healed by about day seven," Dr Buddy says, adding that clients usually return to work after seven to 10 days. The desired results are usually achieved after just one or two treatments.

HOW LONG DO RESULTS LAST?

Improvements start in the first week and continue over the next six months as the skin replaces old cells with new cells. Treatment for scars and specific areas of discolouration are permanent, while wrinkles and sagging skin may need to be treated every two to five years to combat the continual ageing process.

HOW IT COMPARES WITH OTHER OPTIONS?

While other Co2 lasers are available, Dr Buddy says Fraxel Laser's fractional technology is safer and gentler. "It reduces the risk and downtime dramatically as you're treating a microscopic area at any one time, rather than hitting the whole surface," he explains. This also allows a deeper and more effective treatment. Fraxel Restore Laser is also available at MD Cosmedical Solutions. This involves no downtime, is used for less severe conditions and requires four to five treatments.
